

DISCLAIMER

Please note that contacting the Law Firm of David G. Sigale, P.C., by e-mail does not create an attorney-client relationship. We cannot agree to maintain the confidentiality of communications sent through this web site. Therefore, confidential or time-sensitive information should not be sent through this form.

Professional obligations require that before accepting any new client or new matter, the Firm must determine whether there are any actual or potential conflicts with any existing or former clients. If you wish to inquire about becoming a client of the firm, please request a personal consultation. The Firm will not consider e-mails regarding new client representation except for a request for a personal consultation.

PRIVACY POLICY

The Firm values your privacy. If you contact us via this website, we may collect your name, e-mail address and other similar information in order to respond to your message. Anonymous usage and demographic data may also be collected through the use of cookies. We use this data to tailor your experience on our website, provide content that you might be interested in, perform general improvements to our website, and display the content according to your preferences. We employ commercially reasonable security measures, including the use of firewalls, to adequately protect your information, but please understand that no security system is 100% fail-safe.

While providing legal services to clients, the Firm may receive private personal information from the client (or from third parties with the client's authorization). We do not disclose non-public personal information about clients or former clients, except as authorized by the client or as required or permitted under applicable law and rules of professional ethics. We retain records relating to the professional services we provide to better assist a client's needs and, in some cases, to comply with professional guidelines.

Attorneys, including the Firm, are bound by professional standards of confidentiality that are more restrictive as to the disclosure of confidential client information than those required by federal privacy laws. Attorneys are also bound by their professional rules of ethics to protect clients' right to privacy. Access to non-public personal information regarding clients is restricted to those persons who must have access to the records to provide the services requested by the client. We maintain physical, electronic and procedural safeguards to protect a client's private personal information in accordance with our professional standards.

You may cancel your registration with our website at any time simply by contacting us. If you do not want to receive information about our services, please contact us.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'D. G. Sigale', with a large, stylized initial 'D'.